Junior League of Washington to Surpass 37,000 Volunteer
Hours in 14 Years of Partnership with Library of Congress's National Book Festival

JLW Volunteers Serve as Festival's Primary Source for Volunteers, Promote Literacy in the DC Community

WASHINGTON, DC — For the 14th consecutive year, the Junior League of Washington (JLW) will provide necessary volunteer support for the Library of Congress's National Book Festival (NBF), taking place Saturday, September 24, at the Washington Convention Center. This year, more than 400 JLW volunteers will donate their time to the event, participating in tasks including staffing book-signing lines, assisting with book sales, and aiding librarians from across the country.

"The Junior League of Washington is incredibly proud of its longstanding relationship with the Library of Congress's National Book Festival," said JLW President Elizabeth Keys. "At its core, the National Book Festival is an event that celebrates the positive impact of books and reading, a focus that the Junior League of Washington shares."

Across 14 years, more than 5,700 JLW volunteers have provided more than 37,000 volunteer hours to the NBF - totaling over $1 million in in-kind support.

This year, for the first time, the volunteer shirts worn by JLW volunteers at NBF will have the JLW logo on them, highlighting the important role JLW plays at the festival. For the second year in a row, the JLW logo will also appear on the official festival poster.

"Supporting the National Book Festival allows our organization to highlight the importance of voluntarism as well as promote literacy in our community," Keys said. "We value the partnership that we have built with the Library of Congress and look forward to once again helping make this year's festival a success."
